

The Museum and the Public

A lecture presented at Teachers College, Columbia University, by RCAC Board member and Emeritus Senior Scholar at the Smithsonian Institution Center for Museum Studies, Stephen Weil. The lecture focuses on the relationship between museums and the public and poses the hypothesis that museums are evolving from having mastery over the public into institutions that are servile to the public.