Sam Abrams is the Director of the National Center for the Study of Privatization in Education (NCSPE). Before coming to TC as a visiting scholar in 2008, Abrams was a high school teacher of history and economics for eighteen years, the last nine of which at Beacon, a public school on Manhattan’s West Side. His forthcoming book, The Children Must Play: Education, Business, and Conflict (Harvard University Press), grew out of the thesis he wrote in 2006 under Henry M. Levin as a candidate for a master’s degree in Economics and Education at TC. For his work in advancing the understanding of Finnish education, Abrams was awarded the Insignia of Knight, First Class, of the Order of the Lion of Finland by the Finnish government in 2014. Abrams grew up in Holyoke, Massachusetts, and earned a bachelor’s degree in history at Columbia. Outside of work, Abrams has been running a reading program and coaching since 2007 as a volunteer with Ice Hockey in Harlem at Lasker Rink in Central Park.
