Responsibilities of Those In Have Power

In the world today, all nations have some type of leader. Whether their government is a democracy, a dictatorship, a monarchy, or even an aristocracy, they all have leaders that are responsible for that nation. Their main responsibility that they have as ~~being~~ the main person in power, is making sure that their society is in check. It's their job to make sure that their society runs smoothly. → Give examples - Make it stronger if this is your thesis

A main responsibility that people in power have is making sure that their society runs smoothly. A type of government that always seems to have things in order is communism. Communism is the type of government that seems to have everything in order, which makes it run smoothly. Hitler is a great example of a leader who made his society run smoothly, even though he only considered his beliefs. His beliefs had a big own impact on how the society was run. In Germany when Hitler was ruling, he was a dictator. He made it so that the Jews were inferior and the Germans were superior. The Jews were very limited to what they could do. Hitler was running his society in some type of order. He had his country ^{run} how he thought it should be run. This is what he called order. It wasn't necessarily right to be a dictator, and run your society so that some were above others, but it is a good example of a leader who is taking responsibility.

Taking the responsibility of keeping your society is in order, and making sure it runs smoothly.

Another example of a responsibility ^{leaders} ~~people in power have to take~~ is making sure that the people in their society are protected. People in power have to protect their citizens from enemies, ^(you don't need this sentence) which usually causes war.) A great example of this is Pearl Harbor and World War 2. When Pearl Harbor was bombed by Japan, The United States declared War on Japan. The president (F.D.R) felt that this attack put the citizens of his society in danger. It wasn't good that the United States started a major war like World War 2, but it was good that the president considered the well being of the citizens when he made his decision. This is a good example of a leader stepping up to their responsibilities, The responsibility of making sure that the citizens of their society are protected

In addition to ^(people in power) having various responsibilities like: making sure things are running smoothly, and protecting the citizens of your society, they also have to try and make their citizens feel equal/respected. A country that does a great job of this is America. Today in America, there are laws made so the citizens of America ~~to feel~~ equal. For example, all citizens in America are ^{allowed} ~~able~~ to vote, this is a law that was made so all citizens have equal opportunity to contribute to ^{America's gov. by decisions.} America. That is one way that America makes sure that their citizens feel equal, by making sure ^{the people have a voice} ~~their voice is heard.~~

There are still issues in America with equality, and gaining respect through equality. However, there are laws being made to help the citizens of America become more equal and help them gain more respect. This is another responsibility that people in power have to take in order to keep their society in order. By making sure that the citizens feel equal/respected.

People in power have a lot of responsibilities. They are ^{mainly} ~~main~~ responsible for keeping their society in order. Inside that main responsibility, there are others such as making sure your citizens feel equal/respected and making sure your citizens are protected. Keeping a society in order ^{helps} ~~causes~~ the citizens ^{and more secure} to feel comfortable in their society. It may also cause them to like their leader, and how her leader is running their society. People in power have many responsibilities, and it is important for them to own up to them. Their responsibilities ~~can~~ have a big impact in their society and their citizens.

→ OR TO TRUST THEIR LEADER MORE

what he called order. I'm not saying that communism/dictatorship is a good way to run a society, but it is an example of leaders taking the responsibility of keeping their society in order. Making sure it runs smoothly.
