In some religions they do not celebrate Christmas and other religions they don't celebrate anything at all. The reason for that is because if they do it goes against their religion and their not following the rules. For example the Jews, instead of celebrating Christmas they celebrate 7 days of Hanukah. Jehovah witnesses do not celebrate Christmas or birthdays. Doing a certain thing in your religion such as not celebrating a specific holiday defines your role in life. It also defines what role your religion plays in your life.

How does this relate to thesis?

Religions also believe in different things such as gods. As I know Christians believe in God and Jesus. But other religions like the Greeks believe in all these different gods, "I committed my life to God and asked Jesus to be with me from now on." This shows that people rely on their gods to help them through life and put their life in their gods hands. A lot of religions do that because they believe that their god is the only one that they could trust and the only one that they would believe.

Religions also against gay marriage and they think its wrong. But other religions think there is nothing wrong, they think that "my faith means amazing hope for the future as when I die the bible says God will not reject me as a sinner because I trusted him." The quote is trying to say that you could be gay and get married and it doesn't matter if no one else likes it. God will still except you as long as you trust him and not worry about what others are saying.

Religion has a big meaning in our society and community.

Throughout this whole essay the main point was about how different religions do different things. Also the different things they believe in and the different ways they believe in their gods. If it was not for religion then people wouldn't have a meaning in life. Then they wouldn't know the main thing they are trying to show in life. So they could send their own point out into the world.
