

October 30, 2006

Humanities/Dali

Entry # 4: He's Not Perfect

You have a good relationship and he wants to keep it going forever because he loves you. But there's something's that is not perfect about him. When your not around he flirts with other girls because he knows your not there to say something. He's not perfect because he can't promise you everything you want in the world. He's not perfect because when he's with you and he sees another girl past by he has to look because he can't control his hormones but he still loves you. When you're with him he feels happy and lucky but he's not perfect because he would always have something on his mind. He's perfect to you because you understand him and knows what he's going through but to him he's not perfect. There's something that he does wrong that could affect his relationship with you and he doesn't want it to. When he does these wrong things he thinks about you and wonder what you would say if you would of found out what he was doing. He doesn't want it to end because he knows the great things that could happen. He may say he loves you and he means it but he still isn't perfect. You can't make him perfect he could only make himself perfect for you and for him. But he already knows your response you don't have to be perfect that's why I love you and he would say but I want to be perfect for you. He can't be perfect he tries all the time but it never work because he's not perfect. If you would chose right now to end it all he would understand but remember he still loves you and nothing would stop that from happening. He's doesn't want to treat you bad because he knows what would happen, you would get stressed out and your life would be turn upside down. He knows that because he has seen it before. He's not perfect but he knows how to treat a girl that loves him a lot and that he loves back and he doesn't want to see her heart broken. Life doesn't make him perfect, he has to make his life perfect but when he tries, life just pounds him to the ground. When he tries to make life perfect with you, he wins because he's the one pounding life to the ground. But remember he's not perfect he could only make himself perfect.